

Clients often complain about how much time and money it takes to answer customer emails. Many fail to do so altogether.

Relabel answering customer emails as CRM – Customer Relationship Management.

Then tell what a bargain they're getting – a CRM package for the cost of their free email software and someone to do the answering.

